PRACTICE FOCUS

Daniel Hofherr is a solution-focused Attorney in the Business Law and Transactions Practice Group at Offit Kurman. When working with Daniel, he provides guidance without the jargon, making the process of advancing your objectives understandable.

As a business lawyer, Daniel advises clients that are in all phases of the business lifecycle from startup, to growth and expansion, to maturity and exit. Daniel assists his clients with matters such as developing internal corporate governance framework, bringing on and transitioning out equity owners, obtaining private equity financing, offering employee retention incentives, improving customer contract management, protecting and monetizing intellectual property, and navigating business succession planning.

As a transactional lawyer, Daniel can assist you in getting your merger or acquisition to closing. From developing terms of an initial letter of intent, to pre-sale corporate clean-up or buy-side due diligence, to navigating a purchase agreement, Daniel keeps your objectives in mind. His transactional experience spans a broad range of industries including software engineering and information technology; electric, mechanical, and automotive services; real estate holdings; healthcare services (e.g. medical, dental, physical therapy, elder care, and chiropractic); government contractor services; and graphic design and printing.

Daniel learned what is important (and what is not important) in business by working in it prior to becoming an attorney. Now, he focuses his practice on helping businesspeople get from A to B with their goals in mind. When he is not in the office, Daniel enjoys working on cars and tinkering with web development. Pursuit of these passions are reflected in his nuts-and-bolts approach to legal work.
